Unit description

This unit initially examines the way in which laws relating to taxation impact social and economic issues in Australia. Taxation of various kinds is the primary means by which wealth can be distributed: inequities and distortions can promote investment in specific economic activities, encourage or discourage savings and lead to exploitation and avoidance by the wealthy through the use of loopholes and complex business structures. Ultimately, this affects the government's ability to provide essential social services such as health, education and housing. The second part of the unit entails a sophisticated examination of the fundamental elements of the Australian taxation system including residency, income, deductions, capital gains tax and the taxation of trusts.

Important Academic Dates

Changes from Previous Offering

This revised unit provides a solid introduction to the fundamentals of the Australian tax system. There will be an emphasis on Income Tax and its assessment under the Income Tax Assessment legislation, as well as the Goods and Services Tax (GST) and Capital Gains Tax (CGT) regimes. A critical approach is emphasised throughout. Students will be encouraged to think beyond the traditional categories and to pursue an approach to taxation law underscored by critical thinking. Topics covered will include:

- A broad overview of the self-assessment system and how tax is administered
- The interaction between various taxes
- Residence and source
- The concept of income and assessable income

- capital gains and their inclusion in assessable income
- allowable deductions including the general deduction rule
- deduction regimes that supplement the general deduction rule
- taxation of capital gains made through partnerships, trusts and corporations
- The basic rules for capital gains (CGT)
- Main residence exemption and small business concessions under the CGT regime
- The basic rules of goods and services tax (GST)
- Adjustments for GST
- GST free supplies and input taxed supplies
- Property issues in relation to GST
- The general anti-avoidance rule
- Challenges to decisions of the Commissioner of taxation.
