Delivery and Resources

Please check iLearn for more details. This unit is called a 'shell' unit, which means that you need to attend lectures and tutorials or seminars in some other teaching unit in order to pass this one - that is the reason why it is not listed on a student timetable. You do not also enroll in these units through eStudent: contact me (Ian Plant: ian.plant@mq.edu.au) and I will add you to the ilearn page for the unit of your choice and inform the convenor of that unit. Also, please contact me as the course-convenor of the Graduate Certificate (ian.plant@mq.edu.au) to let me know your choice or discuss your options. You may choose any of the 3000 level AHIS units (except AHIS3000) that are offered in this session. Note you may take AHIS6201 in a different session if the unit you wish to take is not on in this session. A list of units may be accessed through this link:

<https://coursehandbook.mq.edu.au/search?q=AHIS>

The exact deadlines for the assessments will be determined by the course convenor of the unit you choose. Assessment tasks in the Graduate Certificate will differ in some ways from those of the undergraduate unit you are accessing and be assessed at graduate level. You will need to discuss this with the convenor of the unit you have chosen. See the AHIS/AHIX6201 iLearn site for more information.

Unit Schedule

Check the iLearn page of your chosen unit of study for details of the unit schedule.

You should also check there (and confirm with the convenor of that unit) the due dates for the submission of your assessment tasks.
