Unit description
Sales is an important function in any commercial organisation. Within organisations, salespeople play a crucial role in aligning their organisation's offerings with customers' needs, and in maximising value creation for both the customer and the selling firm. Moreover, to keep up with today's empowered buyers in both B2B and B2C contexts, salespeople need to personalise the entire sales experience to meet the buyer's wants. This unit develops students' knowledge of theories and concepts underpinning the planning and operationalisation of a firm's sales. It also focuses on developing students' knowledge of personal selling, addressing the critical analysis and application of sales tactics. Students will develop communication skills necessary for successful sales.
