AHIX2225 Rome and the Caesars

Unit description

Rome and the Caesars focuses on the political and institutional history from the murder of Julius Caesar (44 BC) to the First Tetrarchy (284-305 CE). Students will study how the lives and policies of Roman emperors affected those living in the Roman empire. Training will be provided in the study of literature, coins, inscriptions and archaeological evidence.

Important Academic Dates

Information about important academic dates including deadlines for withdrawing from units are available at <https://www.mq.edu.au/study/calendar-of-dates>

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of this unit, you will be able to:

ULO1: illustrate a broad knowledge of historical developments, research principles and discipline specific methodologies for the study of Roman imperial history

ULO2: devise arguments and solve problems relating to Roman imperial history.

ULO3: present a clear and coherent, evidence based exposition of knowledge and ideas about Rome and the Caesars

General Assessment Information

Unless a Special Consideration request has been submitted and approved, (a) a penalty for lateness will apply – 10 marks out of 100 credit will be deducted per day for assignments submitted after the due date – and (b) no assignment will be accepted seven days (incl. weekends) after the original submission deadline.

Extensions for the submission for assessed work need to be submitted online (convenors and tutors are not permitted to grant you an extension). The link to locate relevant information and to request Special Consideration can be found via this link Special Consideration - Eligibility | MQ Sydney

Assessment Tasks

| Name | Weighting | Hurdle | Due |
|---|-----------|--------|---------------------|
| Rome and the Caesars Blog | 50% | No | 11:59 pm 05/06/2022 |
| Portfolio of Ancient Sources with Historical Commentary | 50% | No | 11:59pm 15/05/2022 |

Rome and the Caesars Blog

Assessment Type ¹: Non-academic writing

Indicative Time on Task ²: 38 hours

Due: 11:59 pm 05/06/2022

Weighting: 50%

The blog is your second and final assessment item. You will develop your own blog based on a topic (or topics) studied in the unit, or alternatively develop a blog that is of personal interest.

Your blog will illustrate a broad knowledge of historical developments, research principles and discipline-specific methodologies for the study of Roman imperial history.

Your blog should include an examination and critical evaluation of historical data, showing initiative and judgement.

It should also demonstrate competency in devising and sustaining an argument or arguments to present a clear and coherent, evidence-based exposition of knowledge and ideas about Rome and the Caesars.

Your blog should communicate academic subject matter relating to Rome and the Caesars, but will be written so that members of the public would find the material accessible and be able, after reading the blog to discover further information on the topic (via references, hyperlinks, etc.).

We would anticipate that you would need to spend 38 hours on this piece of work over the whole teaching session.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- illustrate a broad knowledge of historical developments, research principles and discipline specific methodologies for the study of Roman imperial history
- devise arguments and solve problems relating to Roman imperial history.
- present a clear and coherent, evidence based exposition of knowledge and ideas about Rome and the Caesars

Portfolio of Ancient Sources with Historical Commentary

Assessment Type ¹: Portfolio

Indicative Time on Task ²: 40 hours

Due: 11:59pm 15/05/2022

Weighting: 50%

When preparing for your tutorials/online forums each week, you will study ancient sources and review lecture slides. Following tutorial/online forum discussion, you will compile a selection of sources to illustrate and support a key area of learning for your study of Rome and the Caesars.

In addition you will provide a detailed reflection as to why each source selected is important for your understanding of Rome and the Caesars. Your portfolio should include sources that show how initiatives taken by emperors or historical events affected the lives of people within the Roman Empire.

The final portfolio submitted for assessment should demonstrate (1) a broad knowledge of historical developments, research principles, and discipline-specific methodologies for the study of Roman imperial history, as well as (2) a focus on the examination and critical evaluation of historical data, reflecting your initiative, judgement and competency in selecting sources to display the key themes of the study of Rome and the Caesars. The portfolio is developed from work students undertake in the tutorial or on-line forum. Following each tutorial/on-line forum students are encouraged to spend 2 hours writing up their findings to develop the portfolio. In addition, the portfolio will need finessing for submission involving a further 18 hours of study.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- illustrate a broad knowledge of historical developments, research principles and discipline specific methodologies for the study of Roman imperial history
- devise arguments and solve problems relating to Roman imperial history.

- the academic teaching staff in your unit for guidance in understanding or completing this type of assessment
- the Writing Centre for academic skills support.

² Indicative time-on-task is an estimate of the time required for completion of the assessment task and is subject to individual variation

Delivery and Resources

Each week, delivery will be as follows - all details are on iLearn and all readings are available via the Leganto Reading list.

Changes from Previous Offering

This new version of this unit has been developed to create content that focuses on the impact of the Caesars on the lives of people living in the Roman Empire. In so doing, it moves away from the traditional chronological narrative focused on the emperor, his family, and the elite (this can be easily accessed via the Encyclopaedia of Ancient History). The assessment has also changed from the traditional format of Essay and Examination to the development of a Portfolio of Relevant Primary Sources (drawing on content from the tutorials/online forum in particular) and a Blog drawing on topic/s covered in the Lectures and tutorials. To deliver the assessment we will be using Adobe Portfolio (licences for the software will be provided to students).
