Unit description
The ability to effectively communicate and persuade others is an increasingly crucial managerial and leadership skill. Traditional and common sense models of communication often fail to capture the complex, interactive and dramatic nature of what this involves. This unit attempts to remedy this gap by helping you to develop knowledge, capabilities and skills in the following areas of communication and persuasion: their character and significance; different forms and styles; situational, cultural and global factors in determining effectiveness; and the nature of communication programs and persuasion campaigns in innovation projects and transformation programs.

Important Academic Dates

Information about important academic dates including deadlines for withdrawing from units are available at <https://www.mq.edu.au/study/calendar-of-dates>
