Unit description

This is an advanced unit in accounting and corporate governance which examines accounting theories and their relationship to a broad range of issues of current concern to both the accounting profession and accounting information users. This unit introduces students to the fundamental elements of research design and enable them to evaluate relevant quantitative and qualitative research methods and principles applicable to accounting. It seeks to develop students' understanding of the contexts in which quantitative research can be undertaken and the ability to analyse, conduct, and evaluate quantitative forms of research. Students are also required to apply commonly used quantitative methods and techniques to collect and analyse financial and non-financial data, including hypothesis testing. Given the current focus and importance of global convergence of accounting and corporate governance, students are required to examine current issues and problems in complex contexts using social, ethical, economic, political, and global perspectives. Students will be required to analyse relevant scholarly research papers and will be challenged to question the foundations of accounting and corporate governance and to think critically about current issues in accounting.
