Unit description
The concept of business models applies to a broad spectrum of the business community, encompassing venture start-ups, existing private, public and social organisations. This unit takes a practical approach to analyse the value of business models and how sustainable values may be created and captured among different organisations. It looks at the role of critical elements such as sources of revenue, resources, capabilities, cost structure and key stakeholders, and how these elements are orchestrated to create organisation value and sustainability. This unit offers an opportunity to develop skill sets that help to develop innovative business models, and/or refine existing models, and challenges students to apply this knowledge to create business models or refine existing business models.
