Unit description

Anthropologists understand gender as the meanings that a particular society gives to the physical or biological traits that differentiate males and females. This unit will explore how cultural norms around gender and sexuality have defined, constructed, constrained, or expanded people's notions of self, their bodies, and their health in specific sociocultural contexts. The anthropological understanding of gender and sexuality, as well as health, provides a fresh lens on what appears, when viewed in terms of international politics, as 'global imperatives' - the imperative to control female sexuality and population, for example, or to categorise male and femaleness, or to control disease epidemics such as AIDS. Every one of these imperatives in fact is mediated and refracted through understandings and meanings that cling to what is most immediate and local to each of us, namely, our bodies. Anthropology understands these meanings as simultaneously symbolic, biological and existential, but the meanings are also historically and culturally specific. Gender, sexuality, and health are always mediated by the local, even as people absorb and adapt new global discourses about their sexual identity and wellbeing.

Important Academic Dates

Information about important academic dates including deadlines for withdrawing from units are available at <https://www.mq.edu.au/study/calendar-of-dates>

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of this unit, you will be able to:

ULO1: Demonstrate an anthropological understanding of gender and sexuality as sociocultural constructs.

ULO2: Articulate the ways that sociocultural norms around gender and sexuality shape health outcomes.

ULO3: Demonstrate a critical understanding of how the intersection of culture, health and sexuality can underpin vulnerability to sexual and reproductive health problems as well as shape the implementation of government and donor policies and interventions.

ULO4: Critically and reflexively analyse the role of global markets, rise of human capital, increased mobility and structural inequalities in creating disparities in sexual and reproductive health conditions.

ULO5: Analyse the relationship between gender, sexuality and health in global discourses of development and international aid.

General Assessment Information

Unless a Special Consideration request has been submitted and approved, a 5% penalty (of the total possible mark) will be applied each day a written assessment is not submitted, up until the 7th day (including weekends). After the 7th day, a mark of '0' (zero) will be awarded even if the assessment is submitted. Submission time for all written assessments is set at 11.55pm. A 1-hour grace period is provided to students who experience a technical issue. This late penalty will apply to non-time sensitive assessment (incl. essays, reports, posters, portfolios, journals, recordings etc). Late submission of time sensitive tasks (such as tests/exams, performance assessments/presentations, scheduled practical assessments/labs etc) will only be addressed by the unit convenor in a Special Consideration application. Special Consideration outcome may result in a new question or topic.

² Indicative time-on-task is an estimate of the time required for completion of the assessment task and is subject to individual variation

Delivery and Resources

Lectures: Every week, the lecture will be delivered via a live Zoom meeting. Lectures are always interactive with student participation, so please feel free to join us in-person if you can! Lectures will be recorded so if you cannot watch the lecture synchronously, you can catch up on the lecture recording later.

Participation: Make the most of iLearn for discussions about the weekly readings with your classmates. It's a fantastic platform to share your ideas, deepen your understanding of key concepts, and expand your knowledge of medical anthropology. Engage actively and make iLearn your go-to resource for collaborative learning.

Readings: Starting from Week 2, dive into the weekly readings and submit a short summary before each lecture. This will enhance your grasp of the material and prepare you for our discussions. Access all readings via Leganto on iLearn or through the library website. Taking the initiative to find additional reading material can be highly rewarding. If you can't find a reading, email the library at lib.reserve@mq.edu.au or contact the unit lecturer and administrator, Paul Mason, at paul.mason@mq.edu.au. We're here to support your learning journey!

Assessment Submission: Submit all written assessments online via iLearn, and prepare to present your oral assessments during tutorials. Check iLearn for all the details.
