Unit description

Recent surveys of popular historical awareness have demonstrated that most people find out about the past from film and television, yet visual histories are often criticised for the ways they present the past. This unit will consider the limitations and possibilities of history on screen. Do filmic histories represent a more 'authentic' engagement with the past, or do they peddle false versions of history to a gullible public? How might we read historical films and television programs carefully and critically to understand diverse historical interpretations? This unit will develop student's understandings of the critical study of history on film, examining the ways that all historical texts (including films) make arguments about the past. The unit will examine cinematic and televisual representations of Australian, American and British histories.

Important Academic Dates

Information about important academic dates including deadlines for withdrawing from units are available at <https://www.mq.edu.au/study/calendar-of-dates>

General Assessment Information

General Assessment Information

Late Assessment Submission Penalty

Unless a Special Consideration request has been submitted and approved, a 5% penalty (of the total possible mark) will be applied each day a written assessment is not submitted, up until the 7th day (including weekends). After the 7th day, a mark of '0' (zero) will be awarded even if the assessment is submitted. Submission time for all written assessments is set at 11.55pm. A 1-hour grace period is provided to students who experience a technical issue.

This late penalty will apply to non-timed sensitive assessment (incl essays, reports, posters, portfolios, journals, recordings etc). Late submission of time sensitive tasks (such as tests/exams, performance assessments/presentations, scheduled practical assessments/labs etc) will only be addressed by the unit convenor in a Special consideration application. Special Consideration outcome may result in a new question or topic.

Use of Large Language Models ('AI') in this unit: while Macquarie University does not have a policy to 'ban' the use of ChatGPT or other LLMs, I would strongly discourage you from using it. This is for a number of reasons:

1. learning to write clearly and well is a fundamental skill, and one of the most important things you will learn in your humanities education. If you outsource writing, then you're not learning, and you're certainly not going to improve.
2. There are serious academic integrity issues with ChatGPT and AI - if you use these tools to complete your work, is it even 'your' work? Also, tools like ChatGPT rely on taking uncredited material from scholars and writers.
3. Using AI does not guarantee accurate results - again, it undermines your development of critical thinking skills and your ability to evaluate sources. AI often produces really poor history!
4. AI tools have significant negative environmental impacts - they use far more energy and water than standard google searches, for example.

University is a singular opportunity to develop and extend your skills; use that opportunity, rather than outsourcing it to technology. You will reap the rewards for the rest of your life.

Due: 23:59 week 8 (13/9/24)

Weighting: 50%

This assessment task evaluates student's ability to construct an argument in response to a self-devised research question, based on primary and secondary sources. This task is the culmination of the assessment tasks in this unit; all previous assessments provide "scaffolding" for this final task.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- Locate historical films and television programs within the context of their production.
- Demonstrate understanding of the ways that films and television programs produce interpretations of the past.
- Conceptualise and create an original research project by presenting a coherent historical argument that is situated in the relevant historiography.
- Successfully undertake independent primary and secondary historical research.
- Develop and apply a critical vocabulary for the analysis of film and televisual materials as primary sources.

A set of two short answer quiz questions that will be embedded in the recorded lecture and should be completed before the weekly online discussions.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- Locate historical films and television programs within the context of their production.
- Demonstrate understanding of the ways that films and television programs produce interpretations of the past.
- Conceptualise and create an original research project by presenting a coherent historical argument that is situated in the relevant historiography.
