Unit description

When considering CSR, many think about corporate philanthropy and being environmentally friendly. However, strategic CSR is a holistic and long-term approach to the broad responsibilities of business, based on stakeholder integration and ethical behaviour while utilising the firm's resources and brand to address societal and environmental issues. It implies that CSR is aligned with what the company does, its brand, and what it stands for while being embedded in every aspect of the business. In this unit, we will explore the concept of CSR and related ideas and frameworks; discuss stakeholder integration and involvement; current approaches to business ethics; examine sustainability and climate action; and shed light on responsible leadership. We will further work on measuring and reporting impact, communication and marketing, and organisational change towards sustainable and responsible business.

This can be a company one of the group members works/has worked in or a well-known company. The group is required to collect data using publicly available information and/or via interviews and surveys. In the last day of this unit, each group will present for 30 minutes, with each member presenting for at least five (5) minutes on one of the four parts: 1. It will also include one new topic (e.g., SDGs, CSR reporting, CSR marketing, stakeholder integration or organisational change) and offer suggestions for improvement.
