Unit description
This unit applies the tools of microeconomic theory to the study of firm behaviour in imperfectly competitive markets where strategic interactions affect the industry outcomes. It addresses key questions such as: how firms make important decisions regarding what to produce, how much to produce, and how to price output depending on the level of competition they face; how do they decide optimal levels of advertising or R&D; and how do firms behave in markets where network issues are important? Students learn how to see markets, firms and government as three different institutional structures that serve to accomplish economic objectives. Topics covered may include oligopoly market structures, anti-competitive actions such as predatory behaviour and collusion, and non-price models of competition related to advertising, R&D and network economics.

Important Academic Dates
Information about important academic dates including deadlines for withdrawing from units are available at https://www.mq.edu.au/study/calendar-of-dates

Learning Outcomes
On successful completion of this unit, you will be able to:

ULO1: Effectively communicate theories and knowledge of industrial organisation and strategic interactions in technical and non-technical language.
ULO2: Analyse the relevance of industrial organisation and business strategies to everyday economic life.
ULO3: Evaluate real-world applications of economic theory relevant to efficiency and equity considerations, from a broad ethical perspective.
