Unit description

This is an introductory unit in business analytics. Students will examine the use of data in today's world, and the implications of this rapidly evolving ecosystem. The unit will provide an overview of descriptive, predictive, and prescriptive analytics and will allow students to explore basic analysis techniques that are commonly used in practice using real-world data tools. The unit also provides an understanding of contemporary information systems that are necessary in organizations for utilizing and implementing analytics solutions. It presents the nexus between the business and the information systems functions to be able to take advantage of existing and emerging data-driven technologies while caring for ethical and trust implications.

Important Academic Dates

Information about important academic dates including deadlines for withdrawing from units are available at <https://www.mq.edu.au/study/calendar-of-dates>
