Unit description

Public international law regulates the legal issues that have global or transboundary dimensions. Through this unit students evaluate the effectiveness of international law in addressing real problems that confront the international community. The unit provides an introduction to public international law's key principles, rules, norms and practices. Coverage includes the role of the United Nations, the law of treaties, the rights and responsibilities of states vis-a-vis each other, their own nationals and those of other states, the limits of state jurisdiction, state and diplomatic immunity, international dispute settlement and the relationship between international law and Australia's legal system.

Important Academic Dates

Information about important academic dates including deadlines for withdrawing from units are available at <https://www.mq.edu.au/study/calendar-of-dates>

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of this unit, you will be able to:

ULO1: Demonstrate an advanced knowledge of the fundamental principles of public international law including the identification and analysis of key primary sources of international law including treaties and case law.

ULO2: Describe the role, rights and responsibilities of some major international organisations under international law.

ULO3: Apply international law to complex situations and explain the operation of the rights and responsibilities of states in relation to other states; international institutions; private interests and domestic populations.

ULO4: Critically analyse the relationship between international and national law, particularly Australian law.

ULO5: Describe and assess the various means for dispute resolution at international law

ULO6: Communicate professionally, effectively and in a timely manner in legal and interdisciplinary settings, and participate in verbal and non-verbal exchanges with diverse audiences and in diverse contexts.

ULO7: Learn and work independently, meet deadlines, and reflect on performance in a legal setting using feedback to support personal and professional development.
