Unit description
Archival research is understood to be the foundation of the practice of professional historical inquiry. These various historical artefacts are considered our window onto past lives, experiences and processes. As any historian will admit, however, archives are always partial, incomplete and imperfect. So too, the processes by which certain kinds of knowledge is retained and other kinds of knowledge discarded, dismissed or concealed reveals the inherently politicized character of archival collection. This unit will critically and historically consider the relationship between the historian, archives and the past. How and when did modern “archives” emerge? What was their purpose? What are the implications for historical authority if we admit that the foundation of our disciplinary practice is always incomplete and partial? What new archives have emerged in late modernity? Is the internet one huge and unruly archive?

Important Academic Dates

Seminar Participation
Due: Assessed weekly
Weighting: 20%

Students will be assessed for preparedness and contributions to discussion.

Students will also be required to lead the seminar discussion at least once during the semester (depending on final enrolment numbers). Students will choose the week/s they will lead in the first seminar. The seminar leader will need to provide a set of questions for the required readings, in advance, and initiate and facilitate the discussion of these questions in class.

On successful completion you will be able to:
- Demonstrate coherent and advanced knowledge of some of history’s principles, methods, and concepts
- Identify and reflect critically upon the knowledge and skills developed in the student’s own study of history.
- Demonstrate written and verbal communication skills to present a clear and coherent exposition of historical knowledge
- Reflect critically on the relationship between archival discovery and historical knowledge

Reading Archives
Due: 26 March 2015
Weighting: 20%

Students must complete a preliminary analysis of one piece of self-located historical evidence.
Students are free to choose any type of evidence (eg. a document, an object, a piece of art, etc). The analysis must include:

• A close reading of the historical significance of the evidence
• A clear exposition of the relevant historical context
• An engagement with some relevant historiography
• A proposal for a reading method for further research

On successful completion you will be able to:

• Demonstrate coherent and advanced knowledge of some of history’s principles, methods, and concepts
• Demonstrate skills in reviewing, analysing, and synthesizing documentary evidence
• Demonstrate initiative and judgment in historical scholarship.
• Demonstrate written and verbal communication skills to present a clear and coherent exposition of historical knowledge

Reflective Essay

Due: 15 June 2015
Weighting: 60%

By the end of Week 7, each student must submit a chapter or an article by an historian that reflects either on documentary research in a theoretical, practical, or methodological manner or on the construction and nature of archives. Please supply PDF version of the article or chapter to the unit convenor by 24 April. These will be made available on iLearn.

Students must then write a critically reflective essay that uses at least four (4) of these articles to frame and/or guide an essay that engages with at least six (6) weekly topics. Students should devise their own essay question and have complete free rein in doing so.

On successful completion you will be able to:

• Demonstrate coherent and advanced knowledge of some of history’s principles, methods, and concepts
• Demonstrate initiative and judgment in historical scholarship.
• Identify and reflect critically upon the knowledge and skills developed in the student’s own study of history.
• Demonstrate written and verbal communication skills to present a clear and coherent exposition of historical knowledge
• Reflect critically on the relationship between archival discovery and historical knowledge.
Delivery and Resources

Two-hour weekly seminar: consult the MQ Timetable for details.

A unit reader containing the required readings for the course will be available for purchase in the Co-Op Bookshop. Students are expect to own a copy of this reader. One copy will also be available on Reserve in the MQ Library.
