Unit description
Awareness of the fundamental properties of a given text is essential for effective, professional translating and interpreting. This unit builds on and draws on principles from a range of discourse and text analysis approaches to examine the nature of text and of text analysis strategies essential to effective, professional translation and interpreting. Analytical approaches include: discourse analysis, conversation analysis, and systemic functional grammar. The goal of the unit is to promote awareness of differences between English and students' other working language, and the implications of these differences for achieving lexical, morphological, syntactical and discourse equivalence in translation and interpreting.

Important Academic Dates
Information about important academic dates including deadlines for withdrawing from units are available at https://students.mq.edu.au/important-dates

Learning Outcomes
On successful completion of this unit, you will be able to:

Engage with texts in ways that are critical to the success of translators and interpreters

Demonstrate improved translating and interpreting skills through close analysis of discourse features of English texts and equivalent texts in LOTE

Recognise discourse features of English and LOTE in different genres, registers and text types, and apply this knowledge to practical translating and interpreting assignments
Communicate effectively in English and LOTE for the purposes of translation and interpreting

General Assessment Information

Assignment Submission

All assignments should be submitted via iLearn.

TRAN880 – (NAME OF ASSIGNMENT) – (YOUR NAME)

Example: TRAN880 – CLASS ASSIGNMENT 1 – WU WEI

Your assignments should be double-spaced, with your name and the subject code clearly displayed on every page as a header, and the page number as a footer.

Unless students have negotiated an extension based on documented evidence of significant disruption to their studies, a penalty of 5% per day will apply to late submission of assignments.

Unless otherwise negotiated, assignments will not be accepted at all AFTER the date on which the marked assignments are returned to all students in the unit.
