Unit description
It is impossible to comprehend or participate in contemporary international relations without an understanding of the politics of human rights. This unit explores the evolving system of international law, rules and principles that seek to promote human rights. Students will examine contemporary theories of 'human rights', the historical development of international human rights practice and its impacts within contemporary global politics. We will also examine the ways in which international human rights practice influences contemporary political controversies over issues such as refugees, sexual rights, torture and economic development.

Important Academic Dates
Information about important academic dates including deadlines for withdrawing from units are available at https://students.mq.edu.au/important-dates

Online Discussion Leadership

Due: Various
Weighting: 20%

This task is designed to develop and assess your written communication skills in informal settings, and your ability to lead and manage discussion. At the beginning of semester we will assign tutorial topics to presenters. Working with at least one other student (using online discussion tools to plan your presentation) you will lead online discussion for a week, using materials or activities to engage your audience. Remember, don't post an essay online and keep presentations short. The point of the exercise is to lead discussion: which means you need to prompt and encourage participation rather than dominate it. Any form of presentation is acceptable. You could conduct a debate, show some images, run a role play, conduct a quiz, show media etc. Your presentation should help others to gain greater understanding by analysing the week’s topic and linking it to current human rights issues. For example a presentation on the topic of ‘International Enforcement’ may consider the doctrine of “Responsibility to Protect” and perhaps link this to the current situation in Syria or the recent military action in Libya.

Your group must email jonathan.symons@mq.edu.au (or your tutor) a 700 word paper by Friday 5 pm the week prior to your presenting week. This paper should outline the resources you have drawn on and explain how you have sought to engage the group and what you have sought to achieve in the class. It may contain some of the posts/materials that you intend to use to prompt class discussion.

You will be assessed on five criteria as a group:

- Preparation
- Organization
- Content
- Creativity
- Engagement

You will be assessed as a group and your group will receive a mark out of 20 for your presentation.

All students are expected to engage in each other's presentations. Failure to engage in a meaningful manner with at least 50% of presentations will lead to a grade penalty being imposed.

This Assessment Task relates to the following Learning Outcomes:

- Demonstrate an understanding of the basic concepts and development of international human rights law
- Undertake independent research and present that research during discussions and in written form;
- Critically evaluate and analyse arguments surrounding the international human rights regime – both orally and in written work
- Identify and organise relevant theories, concepts and case studies to communicate (orally and in written work) a persuasive, coherent, critical argument
- Work collaboratively within tutorials to create critical, dynamic discussion
- Explain and reflect upon some of the major international issues occurring within international relations and the role that human rights plays within these issues

Online Quiz

Due: Week 6
Weighting: 10%

A mid-semester test comprising 10 multiple choice questions (worth 1 mark each and therefore 10% of the total assessment) covering material presented in the unit up to and including week 5. The test itself will be conducted at the end of week 6 and will cover material presented in the first 5 weeks. The test will be administered on-line. You will have access to the test from 9am Thursday Week 6 - 5pm Saturday. Once you open and start the test, however, you will have only a certain amount of time in which to finish it (e.g. 20 mins). You will need to revise all the material presented in the first 5 weeks of the course to answer the questions before you start the test. You won’t be able to attempt to simply look answers up during the test.

This Assessment Task relates to the following Learning Outcomes:
- Demonstrate an understanding of the basic concepts and development of international human rights law

Research Essay
Due: Week 8
Weighting: 40%

Students are required to submit a research essay of no more than 2500 words in length.

This Assessment Task relates to the following Learning Outcomes:
- Demonstrate an understanding of the basic concepts and development of international human rights law
- Identify and explain the connections between the principles, norms, rules and decision-making procedures that make up the international human rights regime;
- Undertake independent research and present that research during discussions and in written form;
- Critically evaluate and analyse arguments surrounding the international human rights regime – both orally and in written work
- Identify and organise relevant theories, concepts and case studies to communicate (orally and in written work) a persuasive, coherent, critical argument
- Explain and reflect upon some of the major international issues occurring within international relations and the role that human rights plays within these issues

Take Home Exam
Due: Week 13
Weighting: 30%

An end-of-semester take home exam will cover content drawn from the entire unit. The exam will consist of 4 questions and the maximum word length will be 2000 words.

This Assessment Task relates to the following Learning Outcomes:
- Demonstrate an understanding of the basic concepts and development of international human rights law
- Identify and explain the connections between the principles, norms, rules and decision-making procedures that make up the international human rights regime;
• Critically evaluate and analyse arguments surrounding the international human rights regime – both orally and in written work
• Identify and organise relevant theories, concepts and case studies to communicate (orally and in written work) a persuasive, coherent, critical argument
