Unit description
Perception allows the organism to see the world while action allows it to interact with the world. The two systems are intrinsically linked and allow us to not only survive but to thrive in our environment. The course will assume a basic knowledge of these topics from undergraduate courses. It will build on this knowledge with in-depth discussions of current journal articles and ongoing research in the perception in action research group. The course will be student-led, having students present either interesting relevant articles or ideas for future research. The coordinates will help direct in-depth discussion of the topics each week.

Learning Outcomes

1. Through highly structured written essays in each module, students will demonstrate an ability to (1) identify at least one critical theoretical issue/question that motivates research in an area that is relevant to that module; (2) identify how the studies/findings that are discussed in the module have addressed that question; and (3) convey succinctly, yet comprehensively, the progression of this particular research area from its early days to its present-day state.

Weighting: 33%

A short essay (1,250 ~ 1,500 words) on a topic covered in Module 1 (first 4 weeks). Students should discuss the topic of the essay and the relevant literature with the instructor before beginning.

This Assessment Task relates to the following Learning Outcomes:

- Through highly structured written essays in each module, students will demonstrate an ability to (1) identify at least one critical theoretical issue/question that motivates research in an area that is relevant to that module; (2) identify how the studies/findings that are discussed in the module have addressed that question; and (3) convey succinctly, yet comprehensively, the progression of this particular research area from its early days to its present-day state.

Short Essay 2
Due: Week 9
Weighting: 33%

A short essay (1,250 ~ 1,500 words) on a topic covered in Module 2 (second 4 weeks of the semester). Students should discuss the topic of the essay and the relevant literature with the instructor before beginning.
This Assessment Task relates to the following Learning Outcomes:
• Through highly structured written essays in each module, students will demonstrate an ability to (1) identify at least one critical theoretical issue/question that motivates research in an area that is relevant to that module; (2) identify how the studies/findings that are discussed in the module have addressed that question; and (3) convey succinctly, yet comprehensively, the progression of this particular research area from its early days to its present-day state.

Short Essay 3
Due: Week 13
Weighting: 34%
A short essay (1,250 ~ 1,500 words) on a topic covered in Module 3 (weeks 9-12). Students should discuss the topic of the essay and the relevant literature with the instructor before beginning.

This Assessment Task relates to the following Learning Outcomes:
• Through highly structured written essays in each module, students will demonstrate an ability to (1) identify at least one critical theoretical issue/question that motivates research in an area that is relevant to that module; (2) identify how the studies/findings that are discussed in the module have addressed that question; and (3) convey succinctly, yet comprehensively, the progression of this particular research area from its early days to its present-day state.

Delivery and Resources
The lecturers of each module will provide students with a reading list. Students will need to access the papers on those lists through the library’s website or directly from the instructor.

Unit Schedule
Weeks 1-4 will be taught by Matthew Finkbeiner.
Weeks 5-8 will be taught by Anina Rich
Weeks 9-12 will be taught by Paul Sowman and David Kaplan.

Policies and Procedures
Macquarie University policies and procedures are accessible from Policy Central. Students should be aware of the following policies in particular with regard to Learning and Teaching:
