Unit description

This unit explores recent developments in educational psychology and child development and examines links to teaching and learning and other relevant workplace learning contexts. It begins with an analysis of recent topical debates including topics such as the development of motivation and engagement in students, student interactions and the emergence of cyber bullying, and pedagogical debates surrounding applications of student-centred or direct instruction pedagogies. In the seminars students extend their undergraduate study in the field of educational psychology and conduct an independent study of a problem of practical or theoretical significance by deeply engaging with relevant research and theory from a psychological viewpoint. Students develop a research-based understanding of educational psychology related to research or their workplace context.

This unit is offered in Online mode and Internal Seminars* are held on Tuesdays from 5-7pm. Please check the timetable for specific room location.

*Internal classes may be subject to sufficient numbers of students electing this option.

Independent study periods will include online activities to complete on a regular basis. Please check the iLearn website and your email for regular updates.

WEBSITE
The unit webpage can be found at http://ilearn.mq.edu.au. Students will need to use their student username and password to log in and then choose EDCN811 from their My Online Units menu. Please note if you have problems accessing the website or any ICT related problems please call the IT Services help desk.
Unit Schedule

This unit commences in Week 2 of Semester 1. This is due to the staggered offerings of Masters units to ensure students can choose a number of options in any semester with no clashes of offerings.

Seminars: The unit will comprise a number of seminars which will include a recorded 'lecture' component (uploaded to iLearn) and associated activities which include assigned readings, activities and discussion tasks posted online or completed in face to face classes.

Independent online activities: A major component of this unit is the completion of an independent study project and appropriate time is embedded in weekly activities to support independent learning time.

Learning and Teaching Activities
