Unit description
This unit studies the origins and development of Greek and Roman philosophy from the earliest pre-Socratic thinkers in the sixth century BCE, to St. Augustine in the fourth century CE. The unit focuses on the beginnings of Greek critical philosophical thinking – Socrates, Plato and Aristotle – and the great philosophical schools of the Hellenistic and Roman periods. The impact of Roman, and then of Judaeo-Christian thinking on the developing classical tradition are discussed, to show how these different thought worlds have shaped the mind set of modern Western civilisation.

Important Academic Dates
Information about important academic dates including deadlines for withdrawing from units are available at https://www.mq.edu.au/study/calendar-of-dates

Learning Outcomes
On successful completion of this unit, you will be able to:

- The student will learn from a variety of ancient text types about the varieties of ancient philosophical thinking;
- demonstrate a comprehension of ancient world-views and cultural concepts;
- contextualise particular ancient documents within their wider cultural and intellectual environment;
show an awareness of the complexity of ancient accounts of past events, belief-systems and experiences;
conduct independent research on chosen topics;
and formulate an independent view in dialogue with both ancient evidence and modern interpretations.

General Assessment Information

All written assessment tasks (Short Papers and Major Essays) are to be submitted via Turnitin, using the links to be found in the Unit iLearn page.

Late assignments will normally be penalised at the rate of 2% per day, unless prior arrangements have been made with your Tutor. If your assignment is going to be late, please contact your Tutor in advance!

Short Paper

Due: Variable

Weighting: 20%

The student must write a c. 1,000 word short essay based on the weekly tutorial discussion topic of their choice. It must be handed in within a week of the relevant tutorial. All Tutorial Short Papers are to be handed in through Turnitin.

For each week's Tutorial you will find a number of questions on the document(s) set. All of these ought to be prepared for the weekly Tutorial. When you decide to hand in the short paper based on a particular week's topic, you should write using the individual questions as a guide as to what ought to be discussed.

The Short Papers are exercises in careful and critical reading of documentary sources. Their aim is to develop skills of analysis and deduction, and the ability to write a lucid short answer to a precise set of questions. They are not primarily exercises in the collection of the opinions of others, even if those others are great scholars. The assignments will be marked primarily on your understanding of the sources themselves.
Please note that essay form is required for all work submitted. Point form or extended notes are not good enough. Footnotes should be given, and should conform to the rules laid out in “Essay Presentation & Conventions: Style Guide”, which is available from the Ancient History Office on the Fifth Floor of W6A (Room 540), and online in both a shorter and a longer version at https://www.mq.edu.au/pubstatic/public/download/?id=44147, or http://mq.edu.au/pubstatic/public/download.jsp?id=151887.

On successful completion you will be able to:

• The student will learn from a variety of ancient text types about the varieties of ancient philosophical thinking;
• demonstrate a comprehension of ancient world-views and cultural concepts;
• contextualise particular ancient documents within their wider cultural and intellectual environment;
• conduct independent research on chosen topics;
• engage with and responding critically to a variety of scholarly opinions;
• and formulate an independent view in dialogue with both ancient evidence and modern interpretations.

Major Essay
Due: Monday April 27th
Weighting: 35%

Major essay topics are to be chosen from the list of topics, with introductory bibliographies, which will be made available before the fourth week of Semester. Students may also negotiate for an alternative topic with Dr. Forbes. All Major Essays are to be submitted via Turnitin on or before Monday April 27th. The submission link will be found on the Unit iLearn page.

Like Short Papers, Major Essays are exercises in careful and critical reading of documentary sources. Wider reading is also required for the essays. Referencing should follow the guidelines in “Essay Presentation & Conventions: Style Guide”, which is (again) available from the Ancient History Office on the Fifth Floor of W6A (Room 540), and on the Departmental website (as above). Footnotes and a full alphabetical Bibliography are required.

On successful completion you will be able to:

• The student will learn from a variety of ancient text types about the varieties of ancient philosophical thinking;
• demonstrate a comprehension of ancient world-views and cultural concepts;
• contextualise particular ancient documents within their wider cultural and intellectual environment;
• show an awareness of the complexity of ancient accounts of past events, belief-systems and experiences;
• conduct independent research on chosen topics;
• conduct independent research on chosen topics;
• engage with and responding critically to a variety of scholarly opinions;
• and formulate an independent view in dialogue with both ancient evidence and modern interpretations.

Participation
Due: End of Semester
Weighting: 15%

Internal students will be assessed on both their attendance at, and their contribution to Tutorials throughout the Unit. External students will be assessed on their participation in the weekly Online Forums (iLearn) and their attendance at, and their contribution to the On Campus Session.

On successful completion you will be able to:
• The student will learn from a variety of ancient text types about the varieties of ancient philosophical thinking;
• contextualise particular ancient documents within their wider cultural and intellectual environment;
• engage with and responding critically to a variety of scholarly opinions;

Examination
Due: Examination Period
Weighting: 30%

The examination will run for two hours. Students will be asked to answer four essay-style questions from a range of approximately fifteen.

The University Examination period in the First Semester of 2015 is from Tuesday June 9th to Friday June 26th. You are expected to present yourself for examination at the time and place designated in the University Examination Timetable. The timetable will be available in Draft form approximately eight weeks before the commencement of the examinations and in Final form approximately four weeks before the commencement of the examinations at: <http://www.timetables.mq.edu.au/exam>.

The only exception to sitting an examination at the designated time is documented illness or unavoidable disruption. In these circumstances you may wish to consider applying for special consideration under the University's Disruption to Study provisions. Information about unavoidable disruption and the special consideration process is available under the Extension and Disruption to Study section of this Unit Guide.
If a Supplementary Examination is granted as a result of the Disruption to Study process, the examination will be scheduled after the conclusion of the official examination period.

On successful completion you will be able to:
- demonstrate a comprehension of ancient world-views and cultural concepts;
- contextualise particular ancient documents within their wider cultural and intellectual environment;
- show an awareness of the complexity of ancient accounts of past events, belief-systems and experiences;
- engage with and responding critically to a variety of scholarly opinions;
- and formulate an independent view in dialogue with both ancient evidence and modern interpretations.

Delivery and Resources

Technology:
Lectures will be given live and also made available on Echo360. Visual materials used in lectures will be taken from the main Unit Booklet and/or made available as PDF files on iLearn. Brief bibliographies, lists of people, places and technical terms will be made available for each lecture on iLearn.

A computer and Internet access are required. Basic computer skills (e.g., internet browsing) and skills in word processing are also a requirement. You will need a copy of Adobe Acrobat Reader, as most Unit documents are provided in PDF format. This software is freely available on the Internet. Please consult the Unit Convenor for any further, more specific requirements.

Face-to-face Tutorials will be held for Internal students; for External students there will be regular postings on iLearn and discussion on the Online Forum. External students who can come to Internal tutorials are welcome to do so.

Lectures and Tutorials:
Lecture times: Wednesday 2pm, W5C 220, Thursday 12 midday, W5C 320.

Tutorial times (as at mid-February 2015): Wednesday 3pm, W5C 234; Thursday 2pm, W5C 311, Thursday 3pm, W5A 204; Thursday 4pm, W5C 310.

Books you will need:
The required Text Books for the Unit are as follows:

Modern overview:
T. Irwin, Classical Thought, Oxford, 1989

Ancient Sources:

I am aware that this is a larger number of books than are usually set as required texts, but (a) they are all used for tutorial work / short paper topics, and (b) they are mostly very inexpensive. Hopefully, they are books you will find you go back to even outside the boundaries of the Unit.

Problem Solving and Research Capability

Our graduates should be capable of researching; of analysing, and interpreting and assessing data and information in various forms; of drawing connections across fields of knowledge; and they should be able to relate their knowledge to complex situations at work or in the world, in order to diagnose and solve problems. We want them to have the confidence to take the initiative in doing so, within an awareness of their own limitations.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes

• demonstrate a comprehension of ancient world-views and cultural concepts;
• contextualise particular ancient documents within their wider cultural and intellectual environment;

Engaged and Ethical Local and Global citizens

As local citizens our graduates will be aware of indigenous perspectives and of the nation's historical context. They will be engaged with the challenges of contemporary society and with knowledge and ideas. We want our graduates to have respect for diversity, to be open-minded, sensitive to others and inclusive, and to be open to other cultures and perspectives: they should have a level of cultural literacy. Our graduates should be aware of disadvantage and social justice, and be willing to participate to help create a wiser and better society.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes

Socially and Environmentally Active and Responsible

We want our graduates to be aware of and have respect for self and others; to be able to work with others as a leader and a team player; to have a sense of connectedness with others and country; and to have a sense of mutual obligation. Our graduates should be informed and active participants in moving society towards sustainability.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes

• engage with and responding critically to a variety of scholarly opinions;
• and formulate an independent view in dialogue with both ancient evidence and modern interpretations.
