Unit description

The unit aims to combine archaeology with history in the study of a number of key cities of the Roman Near East. The Silk Road and the Frankincense Road brought great prosperity to a number of cities of the Roman East, especially Petra, Palmyra and Dura Europos. Much of the history of these cities is written from a combination of archaeological reports and literary sources. Students will be given the opportunity to learn how to evaluate archaeological evidence against extant literary sources and also to study the architectural history of the Roman Near East.

Important Academic Dates

Information about important academic dates including deadlines for withdrawing from units are available at <https://www.mq.edu.au/study/calendar-of-dates>

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of this unit, you will be able to:

- Analyse and express your judgement about the development of trade in the Roman Near East and specific features of the main cities involved in this trade in oral and written form.
- Interpret written and archaeological evidence with appreciation and understanding of their context and modern interpretations of them.

Work with and respond to the views of staff and other students in the unit in both oral and written form.

Plan, revise and submit written work according to schedule.

Draw together and judge pre-selected and self-located evidence to provide an analysis of trade in the Roman Near East and an important element of the cities involved in this trade.

Assessment Tasks

Name	Weighting	Due
Major Essay	50%	6 November 2015
Participation	20%	27 July - 6 November
In-Class Presentation	30%	Weeks 5, 8 or 13

Major Essay

Due: 6 November 2015

Weighting: 50%

What role did long-distance caravan trade play in the ancient Roman economy? To what extent was local and long-distance trade an important feature of Dura Europos, Palmyra and Petra? Is the epithet “Caravan City” a misleading term when identifying these cities?

On successful completion you will be able to:

- Analyse and express your judgement about the development of trade in the Roman Near East and specific features of the main cities involved in this trade in oral and written form.
- Interpret written and archaeological evidence with appreciation and understanding of their context and modern interpretations of them.
- Work with and respond to the views of staff and other students in the unit in both oral and written form.
- Plan, revise and submit written work according to schedule.
- Draw together and judge pre-selected and self-located evidence to provide an analysis of trade in the Roman Near East and an important element of the cities involved in this trade.

Participation

Due: 27 July - 6 November

Weighting: 20%

Students are expected to contribute to the weekly seminars through involvement in discussion and asking questions. Some of this discussion will be prompted by the unit convenor.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- Analyse and express your judgement about the development of trade in the Roman Near East and specific features of the main cities involved in this trade in oral and written form.
- Interpret written and archaeological evidence with appreciation and understanding of their context and modern interpretations of them.
- Work with and respond to the views of staff and other students in the unit in both oral and written form.
- Draw together and judge pre-selected and self-located evidence to provide an analysis of trade in the Roman Near East and an important element of the cities involved in this trade.

In-Class Presentation

Due: Weeks 5, 8 or 13

Weighting: 30%

Students will be assigned to one of two groups of 3 or 4 students which will prepare and present a 30 minute seminar in week 5, 8 or 13. The seminar will be followed by 15 minutes of discussion with the rest of the group to be co-ordinated by the presenters. Groups and class presentation times will be assigned in the first seminar. A powerpoint presentation should accompany each presentation. You may use any of the material used by me in the presentations in the weeks before and you are also expected to use material which is self-located.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- Analyse and express your judgement about the development of trade in the Roman Near East and specific features of the main cities involved in this trade in oral and written form.
- Interpret written and archaeological evidence with appreciation and understanding of their context and modern interpretations of them.

- Plan, revise and submit written work according to schedule.
- Draw together and judge pre-selected and self-located evidence to provide an analysis of trade in the Roman Near East and an important element of the cities involved in this trade.
