Prerequisites
Admission to MIntComm or MIntRel or MIntCommMIntRel or MIntBusMIntComm or MA in Media Law and Culture

Corequisites

Co-badged status
Transnational Communication is a pre-requisite for this unit. Students may be enrolled in both the units in the same semester.

Unit description
This unit introduces students to the Communication patterns in the Asia-Pacific, a region in which media has registered phenomenal growth. The potential audience numbers in some of the developing countries in the region has catapulted communication industry, including media, into one of the most vibrant sectors in the world. The unit, through case studies drawn from growing powers like India and China and smaller countries as Sri Lanka and Fiji, looks at how communication flows lead to complex political and cultural environments, defying simple mapping and calling into question some of the discourses on globalisation.

Important Academic Dates

Information about important academic dates including deadlines for withdrawing from units are available at https://students.mq.edu.au/important-dates

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of this unit, you will be able to:

- Critique key theories and concepts related to globalisation and their relevance to the study of communication in particular contexts in the Asia-Pacific region
- Apply disciplinary research methods to analyse the similarities and differences within the...
Evaluate communication in the region in the context of historical and politico-social developments
Synthesise alternative views and perspectives on effects of communication flows around the globe

General Assessment Information
Readings are available online. Students may familiarise themselves with library access by attending the library orientation conducted at the beginning of semester (details in the library website). Written assessments are to be uploaded on Turnitin and hard copies dropped in the ICOM assessment box in W6A Student Services. Both hard and soft copies are required.

Participation
Due: Weeks 2-13
Weighting: 10%

Students are to contribute to structured tutorial discussions. Marks are for meaningful contributions and insightful observations that reflect reading and critical thought and analysis. Merely ensuring 80 per cent attendance in tutorials and lectures will unfortunately, not suffice.

On successful completion you will be able to:
- Critique key theories and concepts related to globalisation and their relevance to the study of communication in particular contexts in the Asia-Pacific region
- Evaluate communication in the region in the context of historical and politico-social developments
- Synthesise alternative views and perspectives on effects of communication flows around the globe
Critical Analysis
Due: 27th March 2015
Weighting: 30%

Critically analyse literature on media representations of the 'West' and 'the Rest'.

This is an early assessment aimed at providing feedback on student's understanding of scholarly debates surrounding media representations of the Asia-Pacific (part of 'the Rest') and of academic requirements. The essay of 1500 words requires critical analysis of literature relating to media (print and electronic) representations of people, culture, issues and events. At this stage, students are expected to be familiar with accessing library resources and familiarise themselves with referencing formats.

Broadly, the essay requires wide and extensive reading; students must be able to critically evaluate the West-Rest dichotomy, identify existing literature on media representations, be able to categorise them and make logical and succinct arguments on their relevance in the context of recent international events and the state of global media. Arguments must be related to the theoretical and conceptual framework dealt with in the unit. In short, the work must meet academic requirements with regard to structure, content and references and be of a standard acceptable at the Master’s level.

The criteria against which the paper will be graded are: evidence of understanding of key theories and ability to extend them to the field of communication in the Asia-Pacific region, application of appropriate disciplinary-specific research methods, comprehension of the historical background and socio-political environments, ability to provide alternative perspectives, through in-text referencing and a comprehensive bibliography as also presentation which includes a clear writing style, good grammar and spelling. (Rubric will be posted on ilearn).

On successful completion you will be able to:
- Critique key theories and concepts related to globalisation and their relevance to the study of communication in particular contexts in the Asia-Pacific region
- Apply disciplinary research methods to analyse the similarities and differences within the region
- Evaluate communication in the region in the context of historical and politico-social developments
- Synthesise alternative views and perspectives on effects of communication flows around the globe

Test
Due: Week 8
Weighting: 20%

A multiple-choice and short essay test for an hour in Week 8 tutorial.
This test is to assess understanding of the theories introduced in the unit and the ability to extend them to evaluate issues relating to communication.

On successful completion you will be able to:

• Apply disciplinary research methods to analyse the similarities and differences within the region

Major research essay

Due: 5th June 2015
Weighting: 40%

Answer any one of the following in 2500 words:

1. Critically analyse mainstream media representations in Australia of the Asia-Pacific region

2. Drawing on the theoretical and methodological insights of Edward Said and Stuart Hall, explore the construction of the 'other' in global television.

This assessment requires understanding of media analysis methods (for instance, 'framing' and discourse analysis). A critical evaluation of the theories of globalisation, Orientalism and post-colonialism and examination of their relevance in a world connected (or divided) by communication technologies are expected. Academic requirements at the Masters level – research rigour, evidence of extensive reading, systematic analysis and academic writing – must be met. Essay must have an 'introduction', contain defined sections and a 'conclusion', with a list of references at the end. Generalisations must be avoided and arguments substantiated. In-text references are a must.

Broadly, the essay requires choice of an appropriate media form and outlet to study and analyse; identifying a region/country/community for analysis; collecting data consistently over a period of at least 15 days; analysing the data systematically using an academically accepted method and presenting the findings in the context of the theoretical and conceptual framework of the unit.

The criteria against which the essay will be graded are: evidence of understanding of key theories and ability to extend them to the field of communication in the Asia-Pacific region, application of appropriate disciplinary-specific research methods, comprehension of the historical background and socio-political environments, ability to provide alternative perspectives, through in-text referencing and a comprehensive bibliography as also presentation which includes a clear writing style, good grammar and spelling. (Rubric will be posted on ilearn).

On successful completion you will be able to:

• Critique key theories and concepts related to globalisation and their relevance to the study of communication in particular contexts in the Asia-Pacific region
- Apply disciplinary research methods to analyse the similarities and differences within the region
- Evaluate communication in the region in the context of historical and politico-social developments
- Synthesise alternative views and perspectives on effects of communication flows around the globe

Delivery and Resources

Graduate Capabilities

PG - Discipline Knowledge and Skills

Our postgraduates will be able to demonstrate a significantly enhanced depth and breadth of knowledge, scholarly understanding, and specific subject content knowledge in their chosen fields.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes

- Critique key theories and concepts related to globalisation and their relevance to the study of communication in particular contexts in the Asia-Pacific region
• Apply disciplinary research methods to analyse the similarities and differences within the region
• Evaluate communication in the region in the context of historical and politico-social developments
• Synthesise alternative views and perspectives on effects of communication flows around the globe

Assessment tasks
• Participation
• Critical Analysis
• Test
• Major research essay

PG - Critical, Analytical and Integrative Thinking

Our postgraduates will be capable of utilising and reflecting on prior knowledge and experience, of applying higher level critical thinking skills, and of integrating and synthesising learning and knowledge from a range of sources and environments. A characteristic of this form of thinking is the generation of new, professionally oriented knowledge through personal or group-based critique of practice and theory.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes
• Critique key theories and concepts related to globalisation and their relevance to the study of communication in particular contexts in the Asia-Pacific region
• Apply disciplinary research methods to analyse the similarities and differences within the region
• Evaluate communication in the region in the context of historical and politico-social developments
• Synthesise alternative views and perspectives on effects of communication flows around the globe

Assessment tasks
• Participation
• Critical Analysis
• Test
• Major research essay
PG - Research and Problem Solving Capability

Our postgraduates will be capable of systematic enquiry; able to use research skills to create new knowledge that can be applied to real world issues, or contribute to a field of study or practice to enhance society. They will be capable of creative questioning, problem finding and problem solving.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes

- Apply disciplinary research methods to analyse the similarities and differences within the region

Assessment tasks

- Participation
- Critical Analysis
- Major research essay

PG - Effective Communication

Our postgraduates will be able to communicate effectively and convey their views to different social, cultural, and professional audiences. They will be able to use a variety of technologically supported media to communicate with empathy using a range of written, spoken or visual formats.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes

- Critique key theories and concepts related to globalisation and their relevance to the study of communication in particular contexts in the Asia-Pacific region
- Evaluate communication in the region in the context of historical and politico-social developments
- Synthesise alternative views and perspectives on effects of communication flows around the globe

Assessment tasks

- Participation
- Critical Analysis
- Test
- Major research essay

PG - Engaged and Responsible, Active and Ethical Citizens

Our postgraduates will be ethically aware and capable of confident transformative action in relation to their professional responsibilities and the wider community. They will have a sense of connectedness with others and country and have a sense of mutual obligation. They will be able to appreciate the impact of their professional roles for social justice and inclusion related to national and global issues.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes

- Critique key theories and concepts related to globalisation and their relevance to the study of communication in particular contexts in the Asia-Pacific region
- Apply disciplinary research methods to analyse the similarities and differences within the region
- Synthesise alternative views and perspectives on effects of communication flows around the globe

Assessment tasks

- Participation
- Critical Analysis
- Major research essay

PG - Capable of Professional and Personal Judgment and Initiative

Our postgraduates will demonstrate a high standard of discernment and common sense in their professional and personal judgment. They will have the ability to make informed choices and decisions that reflect both the nature of their professional work and their personal perspectives.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes

- Apply disciplinary research methods to analyse the similarities and differences within the region
- Evaluate communication in the region in the context of historical and politico-social developments
- Synthesise alternative views and perspectives on effects of communication flows around the globe

Assessment tasks

- Participation
- Critical Analysis
