<tr>
<td>This unit explores the foundations of and recent developments in the sociology of education and examines links to teaching and learning and other relevant workplace learning contexts. The seminars explore topical research findings in several areas including the equality and disadvantage in education, global competition, markets and regulation in education, and education and work. The unit will also explore the research methods: ethnography, discourse and contextual analysis. The learning tasks will develop skills in understanding approaches to research and the way in which research problems are identified, described and investigated in this discipline.</td>

Delivery and Resources
Scholarly articles for critical review are identified on the iLearn unit website. These articles are also relevant in preparing the essays on educational disadvantage, and markets and competition in education. For the section on Global trends shaping education an OECD (2016) document, available on-line will be used.

Podcasts will be created each week and will be available by 7:30PM on Tuesday of that week. On the weeks when a seminar is held, the podcast will be a recording of that seminar presentation.
