Unit description

This unit explores some of the central issues in contemporary philosophical moral psychology. The first section focuses on freedom of the will, the nature of autonomy and debates about whether autonomy is compatible with socialisation. In the second section we discuss a range of issues concerning moral responsibility, including the implications of luck and causal determination for responsibility, whether moral responsibility requires an ability to do otherwise, and the conditions under which persons should be exempted from responsibility for their actions. The third section focuses on contemporary theories of personal identity over time by exploring the differences between metaphysical, practical and narrative theories of identity.

Important Academic Dates

Information about important academic dates including deadlines for withdrawing from units are available at <https://www.mq.edu.au/study/calendar-of-dates>

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of this unit, you will be able to:

A good general knowledge of some of the major theories and current debates in contemporary philosophical accounts of autonomy, moral responsibility, and personal identity.

An ability to understand and analyse arguments in the relevant literature.

An ability to evaluate these theories and arguments critically.

The ability to develop your own view or perspective through consideration and analysis of the views and arguments in the unit.

Clarity of thought; clarity of verbal expression; clarity of written expression and exposition.

An ability to undertake independent research.

General Assessment Information

Late Submissions

Unless a Special Consideration request has been submitted and approved, (a) a penalty for lateness will apply - two (2) marks out of 100 will be deducted per day for assignments submitted after the due date - and (b) no assignment will be accepted more than seven (7) days (incl. weekends) after the original submission deadline. No late submissions will be accepted for timed assessments - e.g. quizzes, online tests.

Please see the section on Policies and Procedures for information on how to apply for Special Consideration.

Assessing Active Participation

Active participation is assessed by a student's engagement in activities such as: discussions facilitated by the lecturer/tutor, contributions to online discussion forums, or general questions asked during lectures or tutorials and involvement in set activities. Participation is expected to be well considered and relevant to the unit of study.

Assessment Tasks

Name	Weighting	Hurdle	Due
Tutorial Participation	10%	No	Ongoing
Tutorial presentation	5%	No	Assigned in class
Online quizzes	15%	No	Ongoing
Short answer test	30%	No	01/10/2018
Essay	40%	No	09/11/2018

Tutorial Participation

Due: Ongoing

Weighting: 10%

An important part of philosophy is engaging in active dialogue with others. This mark is allocated on the basis of your participation in both LECTURES and TUTORIALS throughout the semester.

Internal students must attend at least 6 out of the 10 tutorials to be eligible for the participation mark. If you do not attend at least 6 tutorials, you will receive 0 marks for participation. You may participate in online forums but this will not count towards your participation mark.

External students must participate in at least 6 different weekly online discussion forums within a week of the relevant lecture to be eligible for the participation mark. This means that the deadline for forum participation will be Tuesdays 11:59pm. If you do not participate in at least 6 different weekly online discussion forums in time, you will receive 0 marks for participation.

If you meet this minimum requirement, your mark will be awarded on the basis of overall quality of your participation throughout the semester in lectures and tutorials/forums.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- A good general knowledge of some of the major theories and current debates in contemporary philosophical accounts of autonomy, moral responsibility, and personal identity.
- An ability to understand and analyse arguments in the relevant literature.
- An ability to evaluate these theories and arguments critically.
- The ability to develop your own view or perspective through consideration and analysis of the views and arguments in the unit.
- Clarity of thought; clarity of verbal expression; clarity of written expression and exposition.

Tutorial presentation

Due: Assigned in class

Weighting: 5%

Students will undertake a short presentation in tutorials (5 minutes). This will consist of:

1. a summary of a piece of relevant research beyond the required readings;
2. a brief critical analysis of the main argument of that research;
3. a critical response to that argument;
4. a single discussion question that should prompt engagement by other students in the tutorial.

Note: External students will undertake the presentation via a forum post (either in writing or by uploading audio or video) and subsequent discussion.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- A good general knowledge of some of the major theories and current debates in contemporary philosophical accounts of autonomy, moral responsibility, and personal identity.
- An ability to understand and analyse arguments in the relevant literature.
- The ability to develop your own view or perspective through consideration and analysis of the views and arguments in the unit.
- An ability to undertake independent research.

Online quizzes

Due: Ongoing

Weighting: 15%

Online quizzes test comprehension and understanding of the required readings. There will be 10 online quizzes worth a total of 15% (or a maximum of 1.5% for each of the 10 quizzes). There will be 5 questions each week. You can attempt each quiz only once and there is a time limit. Quizzes start in Week 2 and run until Week 11 (for the content of Weeks 3 to Week 12).

Note: the quizzes will be open for one week BEFORE the relevant lecture, and the deadline for each quiz will be at Tuesday 11:59pm. For example, the quiz for Week 3 (Frankfurt on freedom of the will, Watson on motives and values) will open on Wednesday Week 2, and close on Tuesday Week 3. The lecture and tutorials will be on Wednesday. This is to ensure that you have read the required readings before your tutorials, and come to the lecture and tutorial prepared.

As this is a timed assessment, no late submissions will be accepted.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- A good general knowledge of some of the major theories and current debates in contemporary philosophical accounts of autonomy, moral responsibility, and personal identity.

Short answer test

Due: 01/10/2018

Weighting: 30%

The short answer test is designed to test your comprehension of the essential readings and arguments in the unit, and your ability to present your understanding of the readings clearly and succinctly. You are not expected to undertake research beyond the essential readings. You will write 4 answers of 450 words each. The questions will be released on 3 September 2018.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- A good general knowledge of some of the major theories and current debates in contemporary philosophical accounts of autonomy, moral responsibility, and personal identity.

- An ability to understand and analyse arguments in the relevant literature.
- An ability to evaluate these theories and arguments critically.
- Clarity of thought; clarity of verbal expression; clarity of written expression and exposition.

Essay

Due: 09/11/2018

Weighting: 40%

The essay (2200 words) is designed to extend your understanding of a specific topic and to test your ability to engage with that topic in depth. Essay writing tests your ability to synthesise material from a range of readings and to express, analyse, and structure key ideas and arguments clearly, logically, and systematically. It also tests your ability to develop your own view, and to argue for that view in a cogent and sustained way. You will be expected to read and incorporate into your paper a minimum of four secondary sources for this assessment as well as material presented in the unit reader. The questions will be released on 8 October 2018.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- A good general knowledge of some of the major theories and current debates in contemporary philosophical accounts of autonomy, moral responsibility, and personal identity.
- An ability to understand and analyse arguments in the relevant literature.
- An ability to evaluate these theories and arguments critically.
- The ability to develop your own view or perspective through consideration and analysis of the views and arguments in the unit.
- Clarity of thought; clarity of verbal expression; clarity of written expression and exposition.
- An ability to undertake independent research.

Graduate Capabilities

Creative and Innovative

Our graduates will also be capable of creative thinking and of creating knowledge. They will be imaginative and open to experience and capable of innovation at work and in the community. We want them to be engaged in applying their critical, creative thinking.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes

- An ability to understand and analyse arguments in the relevant literature.
- An ability to evaluate these theories and arguments critically.
- The ability to develop your own view or perspective through consideration and analysis of the views and arguments in the unit.

Assessment tasks

- Tutorial Participation
- Tutorial presentation
- Short answer test
- Essay

Capable of Professional and Personal Judgement and Initiative

We want our graduates to have emotional intelligence and sound interpersonal skills and to demonstrate discernment and common sense in their professional and personal judgement. They will exercise initiative as needed. They will be capable of risk assessment, and be able to handle ambiguity and complexity, enabling them to be adaptable in diverse and changing environments.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes

- A good general knowledge of some of the major theories and current debates in contemporary philosophical accounts of autonomy, moral responsibility, and personal identity.
- An ability to understand and analyse arguments in the relevant literature.
- An ability to evaluate these theories and arguments critically.

Assessment tasks

- Tutorial Participation
- Essay

Commitment to Continuous Learning

Our graduates will have enquiring minds and a literate curiosity which will lead them to pursue knowledge for its own sake. They will continue to pursue learning in their careers and as they participate in the world. They will be capable of reflecting on their experiences and relationships with others and the environment, learning from them, and growing - personally, professionally and socially.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes

- A good general knowledge of some of the major theories and current debates in contemporary philosophical accounts of autonomy, moral responsibility, and personal identity.
- An ability to understand and analyse arguments in the relevant literature.
- An ability to evaluate these theories and arguments critically.
- The ability to develop your own view or perspective through consideration and analysis of the views and arguments in the unit.
- An ability to undertake independent research.

Assessment task

- Essay

Discipline Specific Knowledge and Skills

Our graduates will take with them the intellectual development, depth and breadth of knowledge, scholarly understanding, and specific subject content in their chosen fields to make them competent and confident in their subject or profession. They will be able to demonstrate, where relevant, professional technical competence and meet professional standards. They will be able to articulate the structure of knowledge of their discipline, be able to adapt discipline-specific knowledge to novel situations, and be able to contribute from their discipline to inter-disciplinary solutions to problems.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes

- A good general knowledge of some of the major theories and current debates in contemporary philosophical accounts of autonomy, moral responsibility, and personal identity.
- An ability to understand and analyse arguments in the relevant literature.
- The ability to develop your own view or perspective through consideration and analysis of the views and arguments in the unit.
- Clarity of thought; clarity of verbal expression; clarity of written expression and exposition.

- An ability to undertake independent research.

Critical, Analytical and Integrative Thinking

We want our graduates to be capable of reasoning, questioning and analysing, and to integrate and synthesise learning and knowledge from a range of sources and environments; to be able to critique constraints, assumptions and limitations; to be able to think independently and systemically in relation to scholarly activity, in the workplace, and in the world. We want them to have a level of scientific and information technology literacy.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes

- An ability to understand and analyse arguments in the relevant literature.
- An ability to evaluate these theories and arguments critically.
- The ability to develop your own view or perspective through consideration and analysis of the views and arguments in the unit.
- Clarity of thought; clarity of verbal expression; clarity of written expression and exposition.

Assessment tasks

- Tutorial Participation
- Short answer test

Problem Solving and Research Capability

Our graduates should be capable of researching; of analysing, and interpreting and assessing data and information in various forms; of drawing connections across fields of knowledge; and they should be able to relate their knowledge to complex situations at work or in the world, in order to diagnose and solve problems. We want them to have the confidence to take the initiative in doing so, within an awareness of their own limitations.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes

- A good general knowledge of some of the major theories and current debates in contemporary philosophical accounts of autonomy, moral responsibility, and personal identity.

- An ability to understand and analyse arguments in the relevant literature.
- An ability to evaluate these theories and arguments critically.
- The ability to develop your own view or perspective through consideration and analysis of the views and arguments in the unit.
- Clarity of thought; clarity of verbal expression; clarity of written expression and exposition.

Assessment tasks

Effective Communication

We want to develop in our students the ability to communicate and convey their views in forms effective with different audiences. We want our graduates to take with them the capability to read, listen, question, gather and evaluate information resources in a variety of formats, assess, write clearly, speak effectively, and to use visual communication and communication technologies as appropriate.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes

- An ability to understand and analyse arguments in the relevant literature.
- Clarity of thought; clarity of verbal expression; clarity of written expression and exposition.

Assessment tasks

Engaged and Ethical Local and Global citizens

As local citizens our graduates will be aware of indigenous perspectives and of the nation's historical context. They will be engaged with the challenges of contemporary society and with knowledge and ideas. We want our graduates to have respect for diversity, to be open-minded, sensitive to others and inclusive, and to be open to other cultures and perspectives: they should have a level of cultural literacy. Our graduates should be aware of disadvantage and social justice, and be willing to participate to help create a wiser and better society.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes

- A good general knowledge of some of the major theories and current debates in contemporary philosophical accounts of autonomy, moral responsibility, and personal identity.
- An ability to understand and analyse arguments in the relevant literature.
- The ability to develop your own view or perspective through consideration and analysis of the views and arguments in the unit.
