Unit description

Succession law involves the study of wills, probate matters and inheritance. This unit is designed to explore the legal philosophical basis for the principles existing in this area of law, comprised of a combination of distinct categories of law such as property law and equity. In addition, an understanding of the formalities and requirements for valid wills, as well as the interpretative and constructive powers of the courts will be examined. This will equip a law student with the knowledge required to advise on estate planning matters and disputes relating to wills or on intestacy.

Important Academic Dates

Information about important academic dates including deadlines for withdrawing from units are available at <https://www.mq.edu.au/study/calendar-of-dates>

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of this unit, you will be able to:

1. Demonstrate a detailed and thorough knowledge of legal principles relating to the nature of succession law and the theoretical basis for the law.
2. Analyse case law on the Succession Act 2006 (NSW) and apply to family provision and the validity and interpretation of wills.
3. Analyse complex factual situations involving estate disputes and the provisions of wills. 4. Advise on competing claims dealing with testate estates, intestate estates and partial intestacy. 5. Assess the various needs of a family in order to give appropriate advice on wills and family provision. 6. Formulate, present and evaluate arguments on theoretical issues, drawing upon relevant legal authority and policy considerations as regards different conceptions of inheritance.
