Unit description

It is impossible to comprehend or participate in contemporary international relations without an understanding of the politics of human rights. This unit explores the evolving system of international law, rules and principles that seek to promote human rights. Students will examine contemporary theories of 'human rights', the historical development of international human rights practice and its impacts within contemporary global politics. We will also examine the ways in which international human rights practice influences contemporary political controversies over issues such as refugees, sexual rights, torture and economic development.

Important Academic Dates

Information about important academic dates including deadlines for withdrawing from units are available at <https://www.mq.edu.au/study/calendar-of-dates>

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of this unit, you will be able to:

Demonstrate an understanding of the basic concepts and development of international human rights law

Identify and explain the connections between the principles, norms, rules and decision-making procedures that make up the international human rights regime;

Undertake independent research and present that research during discussions and in written form;

Critically evaluate and analyse arguments surrounding the international human rights regime – both orally and in written work

Identify and organise relevant theories, concepts and case studies to communicate (orally and in written work) a persuasive, coherent, critical argument

Work collaboratively within tutorials to create critical, dynamic discussion

Explain and reflect upon some of the major international issues occurring within international relations and the role that human rights plays within these issues

General Assessment Information

Unless a Special Consideration request has been submitted and approved, (a) a penalty for lateness will apply – two (2) marks out of 100 will be deducted per day for assignments submitted after the due date – and (b) no assignment will be accepted more than seven (7) days (incl. weekends) after the original submission deadline. No late submissions will be accepted for timed assessments – e.g. quizzes, online tests.

Assessment Tasks

Name	Weighting	Hurdle	Due
Presentation &amp; Participation	20%	No	Various
Online Quiz	15%	No	Week 7
Research Essay	40%	No	Week 9, Friday 5pm
Take Home Exam	25%	No	Week 13

Presentation & Participation

Due: Various

Weighting: 20%

Internal Students: This task is designed to develop and assess your oral communication skills and ability to work with others. At the beginning of semester we will assign tutorial topics to presenters who will work in pairs. Together, you will run the first 15-30 minutes of the tutorial. Any teaching and learning activity is acceptable, except you must not read a written paper. You could conduct a debate, organise a negotiation activity, prepare a scenario, conduct a quiz etc. Your goal should be to help others gain greater understanding by analysing the week's topic and linking it to current human rights issues. For example a presentation on the topic of 'International Enforcement' may consider the doctrine of "Responsibility to Protect" and perhaps link this to a contemporary case study (Syria, Myanmar etc.).

Each group-member must submit a 500- 700 word paper to ilearn by 5pm on Monday prior to your presentation. This paper should explain how you have sought to engage the group, what you have sought to achieve in the class (what do you hope other students will learn/ reflect on) and outline the resources you have drawn on. You are also encouraged to discuss your presentation plans with your seminar leader ahead of time, either in class or via email to mariam.farida@mq.edu.au (Note, Mariam may do some external teaching and Jon may do some internal teaching). You will be assessed on five criteria:

- Engagement - how was the activity designed in order to engage other students in the issue?
- Understanding - does the presentation demonstrate a sophisticated understanding of the week's topic?
- Research - how thoroughly researched is the topic and the activity format.
- Creativity - how innovative is your method of engaging the class
- Organization of presentation - how well organised is the class that you run.

While each student must make an individual submission to ilearn you are welcome to either submit individually-prepared work or for each member of the group to submit the same paper. In either case, please include a brief note explaining the contribution that each group member has made to the activity. Further information about this task/ discussion threads will be available on ilearn.

External students:

You will complete the same task as internal students, with a few minor modifications. Working with at least one other student (using online discussion tools to plan your presentation) you will lead online discussion for a week, using materials or activities to engage other students. Remember, don't post an essay online and keep presentations short. The point of the exercise is to lead discussion: which means you need to prompt and encourage participation rather than dominate it. Any form of presentation is acceptable but you should try to keep the reading/ media-viewing required for other students manageable. Think carefully about how best to draw others into the topic. You could conduct a debate, work through a guided series of discussion questions, run a scenario or role play etc. Your presentation should help others to gain greater understanding by analysing the week's topic and linking it to current human rights issues.

Each group-member must submit a 500- 700 word paper to ilearn by 5pm on Monday prior to the lecture in which your topic is covered. You are also encouraged to email jonathan.symons@mq.edu.au (or mariam.farida@mq.edu.au if she is convening your week) earlier to discuss your plans. This paper should explain how you have sought to engage the group, what you have sought to achieve in the class (what do you hope other students will learn/ reflect on) and outline the resources you have drawn on. It may contain some of the posts/materials that you intend to use to prompt class discussion.

All external students are expected to engage in each other's presentations. While you will receive a preliminary presentation grade based on your own presentation, your final class participation grade will reflect both your own presentation and also your participation across the semester. You are expected to engage meaningfully in at least 70% of presentations.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- Demonstrate an understanding of the basic concepts and development of international human rights law
- Undertake independent research and present that research during discussions and in written form;
- Critically evaluate and analyse arguments surrounding the international human rights regime – both orally and in written work
- Identify and organise relevant theories, concepts and case studies to communicate (orally and in written work) a persuasive, coherent, critical argument
- Work collaboratively within tutorials to create critical, dynamic discussion
- Explain and reflect upon some of the major international issues occurring within international relations and the role that human rights plays within these issues

Online Quiz

Due: Week 7

Weighting: 15%

An online test comprising of 15 multiple choice questions (worth 1 mark each = 15% of the total assessment) will be conducted at the end of week 7 (covering material presented in the unit up to and including week 7). The test will be administered on-line. You will have access to the test from 5pm Thursday until 5pm Friday in week 7. Once you open and start the test you will have only 30 mins in which to finish it.

This is a timed assessment and no late submissions will be accepted.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- Demonstrate an understanding of the basic concepts and development of international human rights law

Research Essay

Due: Week 9, Friday 5pm

Weighting: 40%

Students are required to submit a research essay of no more than 2500 words in length.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- Demonstrate an understanding of the basic concepts and development of international human rights law
- Identify and explain the connections between the principles, norms, rules and decision-making procedures that make up the international human rights regime;
- Undertake independent research and present that research during discussions and in written form;
- Critically evaluate and analyse arguments surrounding the international human rights regime – both orally and in written work
- Identify and organise relevant theories, concepts and case studies to communicate (orally and in written work) a persuasive, coherent, critical argument
- Explain and reflect upon some of the major international issues occurring within international relations and the role that human rights plays within these issues

Take Home Exam

Due: Week 13

Weighting: 25%

An end-of-semester take home exam will cover content drawn from the entire unit. The maximum word length will be 2000 words. The paper will be released at 9am on Thursday and must be submitted by 5pm Saturday.

This is a timed assessment and no late submissions will be accepted.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- Demonstrate an understanding of the basic concepts and development of international human rights law
- Identify and explain the connections between the principles, norms, rules and decision-making procedures that make up the international human rights regime;
- Critically evaluate and analyse arguments surrounding the international human rights regime – both orally and in written work
- Identify and organise relevant theories, concepts and case studies to communicate (orally and in written work) a persuasive, coherent, critical argument
- Explain and reflect upon some of the major international issues occurring within international relations and the role that human rights plays within these issues

Delivery and Resources

Delivery

For lecture times and classrooms please consult the MQ Timetable website: <http://www.timetables.mq.edu.au>. This website will display up-to-date information on your classes and classroom locations.

Internal students are expected to attend the following classes each week:

Lecture: Thursday 9-9.55am 414 Sir Christopher Ondaatje Avenue - 200 Tutorial Room Note: special arrangements may be made in period immediately after 30 September when train line closes. See ilearn announcements for details.

Tutorial: Thursday 10am & 1pm.

NOTE: Tutorials will begin in Week 2.

Texts

Textbook: Goodhart, Michael, ed. Human rights: politics and practice. Oxford University Press, 2016 (One copy of this book is also available in the library.
